

region of North Carolina.

Hart is an advocate of the Brain Injury Association of North Carolina. He was a senior network engineer at Nortel Networks in Raleigh until he suffered a brain injury in 1999. He is the survivor representing the Central region of North Carolina.

Monnett is the founding partner of Charles G. Monnett III and Associates in Charlotte. He serves on the executive committee of the National Traumatic Brain Injury Litigation Group and the board of governors for the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers. He has been practicing law since 1983, concentrating in the representation of persons significantly injured by automotive accidents, industrial accidents and medical negligence and particularly those who have suffered traumatic brain injury. Monnett received his bachelor's degree from Appalachian State University and his juris doctorate from UNC Chapel Hill School of Law.

Nofziger worked in the casualty insurance industry for 26 years. She is the mother of a brain injury survivor and was involved in starting the Recovery Awareness Foundation, which gives support to caregivers of brain injury survivors.

O'Brien is medical director at WakeMed Rehabilitation in Raleigh and vice president of Carolina Rehabilitation and Surgical Associates, P.A. He is also an adjunct clinical assistant professor for physical medicine and rehabilitation at UNC Chapel Hill. He received his bachelor's degree from Hamilton College in Clinton, New York and his medical doctorate from New York Medical College.

Seligson is the executive vice president and chief executive officer of the N.C. Medical Society. He is a board member of the N.C. Institute of Medicine, an advisory board member of the N.C. Hospital Association Rural Health Care Center and an executive committee member for Leadership North Carolina. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Georgia, master's of business administration from the University of North Florida and master's of arts from N.C. State University.

Selleck is a citizen spokesperson for the Enhanced 911 Emergency Service in Henderson County and a community volunteer. She is a mother of a brain injury survivor.

St. Clair is area director for Eastpointe Human Services. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Appalachian State University and doctorate in education administration from Louisiana State University.